A Wave of Examinations Will Soon Sweep Over The Students

It Will Be A Serious Blunder If NYA Is Abolished By U. S.

It looks as if some one is about to make a serious blunder. Our leaders may think that they would help the war effort in eliminating the NYA, but in my opinion this action would show that they have a distorted sense of values.

After all, when this thing called the National Youth Administration was put into action, it had a purpose, a good purpose that worked in practice as well as theory. It provided a means for students, without means but with determination, to work their way through to a great extent. These students have since made themselves so useful that now the school will suffer greatly at their loss. This is not merely a loss of a few students however, but the loss of conscientious people who make the most of their opportunities.

The question is whether the loss of all of this potential leadership for reconstruction in the postwar crisis is compensated by the gain of a portion of a battleship. The total expenditure of the NYA would hardly buy enough munitions to make a noticeable difference in a big battle, much less the outcome of the entire war. But our leaders, who now seem to think only in terms of billions, think that the few millions invested in future security is a burden to the taxpayers. Even though they encourage students to remain in school until Uncle Sam needs their services, our present administration is willing to sacrifice many of these just because they fail to recognize values.

It seems that a mere few millions added annually to the already incalculable debt would be an investment with manifold returns. J. H.

He Was Willing To Take Jolt If It Set Others Straight

ON THE COLLEGE FRONT BY JIMMY HURT

One of the Duke professors was hauled into court for violating the blackout regulations. But the fine was suspended because the judge found "in unwilling intent to violate the law." After the decision the professor commented:

"If the airing of this case has helped to clarify and make specific some vague and indistinct details, both with regard to the requirements of the inmates of the homes and also concerning the methods of procedure on the part of those executing the ordinance, I am satisfied; and I feel that the cause of awakening a more quickened public conscience concerning our public, and especially our national safety, has been decidedly helped."

Always wanting to help no doubt.

AN OLD OLD STORY IS RETOLD

Having mumps is an old, old story. Recently it was retold in a new way when a young lady appeared in class at Tulane with a sore throat. After having been informed of a sure way to determine whether or not one has the mumps, she went home. A sick on a lemon, a sharp pain ... it was the real thing! Result: one week in bed.

MAYBE HIS LECTURES SHOULD HAVE THE SAME AIM

A great awakening occurred on the Michigan State campus a short time ago. The professor was well in the middle of a lecture in chemical engineering when he noticed a student in the front row sleepily beginning to nod. The professor turned to the board to illustrate a point, but then, with a sudden devastating change of pace he whirled and hurled simultaneously. The aim was good and said student was brought back to life with telling suddenness.

ALL ABSENT MINDER PROFS ARE NOT MEN

An absent minded professor in the physical education department at Michigan State was taking the roll of her soccer class. She called the first few names and the girls responded. Then she looked up from her grade book toward the class. "Are all the rest of you girls here?" she asked. All of course, that were there, answered so she closed her book and began the class. Nice professor.

WAR BRINGS UNSWEPT FLOORS TO ST. EDWARDS

Unmade beds and unswept floors this week at St. Edwards college reflected another kind of scarcity. First it was butter. Then it was sugar. Now it is janitors. All have gone north to hoe weeds.

TEXAS TECH HAS TECHNIQUE FOR HOPE

Texas Tech co-eds have formed a service club, called the "Hubbettees." Every Saturday night a group of the Hubbettees are asked to informally entertain enlisted men from the local airbase at the American Legion hall. Refusal or disinterest on the part of the girls automatically bars them from invitations to the formal dances to be given for officers and cadets.

THEY STUDY THE ART OF BEING HOSTESSES

"How to Entertain Soldiers on Leave" is the subject studied by a group of Los Angeles City College. Known as junior hostesses, the group consists of 60 young business women and college girls ranging in age from 18 to 27. The five-week course is sponsored by the YWCA and the USO.

PROBLEM OF CATALOGUES IS SOLVED AT SMU

Southern Methodist University has rallied to the paper shortage with an entirely new plan for 1942-43 catalogs. Instead of the usual comprehensive edition containing information about every college on the campus, each school is now placed in a separate booklet of about 30 pages. To further distinguish different types of information, each booklet is a different color. Not only will paper be saved by this plan, but prospective students will find it less confusing.

Quotes From Classics

Today's classical quotation is again from Shakespeare this time "Julius Caesar."

"I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him."

"The evil which men do live after them."

"The good is oft interred with their bones." Mark Antony's funeral oration over Caesar.

Bottle Desire Grows From Infancy

By HAROLD WINN

Uncle Slug's desire to stop off at the corner for a short one is just a natural craving for a bottle carried over from the three-cornered pants stage, says a Boston psychiatrist who has made quite an extensive search about these bottle babies commonly called "drunks."

Dr. Merrill Moore, Harvard psychiatrist and research director at the Washington hospital, oldest institution for the treatment of alcoholics in the United States, lists pampering, craving for sweets or stolen food, a chance to be in the limelight, and failure of adequate education in home and school as the main causes for developing the warblers of "Ho, Ho, Ho, I Am."

In other words, Dr. Moore claims that from the first slip on the nursing bottle, the seed is sown for the habitual drunk to spring into bloom. Then when marital and economic difficulties appear in adult life, the embryo drunk remembers the happier bottle stage and immediately heads for the local bar.

The Harvard scientist was one of the first men in the United States to look into the cause of the heavy drinkers, and his research may prove to be a big help to those guys who sit around and soak up the suds to excess.

Dr. Moore claims that for a long time the town drunk has been the forgotten man, but that he and his associates have made long strides toward determining the true nature of the ailment, because they are treating it as a disease.

"Physicians realize that it is now time for medicine and psychology to give the drunk a break and see what can be done to help him as a sick person and as a human being," Dr. Moore stated.

Research has gone forward on hereditary alcoholic tendencies and the psychiatrists are seeking the answer to the question of whether a man becomes a drunkard simply because his father before him was one.

"Alcoholism runs in some families," he said, "but that could as well be the result of common environmental factors as genetics. There is no unassailable positive evidence as yet that alcoholism is hereditary, strictly speaking, or that it directly injures the stock of a family, or that it influences longevity favorably or unfavorably to any marked degree."

The question as to why one man can drink the large uncorked bottle and not get drunk himself is also an important part of the research. "How is it that one man can take one cocktail and start looping, when another can drink six highballs in a row and not bat an eye?" asked Moore. "The answer is: We do not know. But ten

Some persons appear to have a nervous system that is relatively resistant to alcohol and others do not. Everyone knows someone who gets drunk if you hit him on the head with a rotten apple and everyone knows someone else who has 'hollow legs,' and can drink all his friends under the table or take them all home and pour them into the 'Bottle Hymn' of the Republic will be a thing of the past.

"I Believe In National Defense Against--"

"National defense" has been on the lips of every American for several years now and the consensus of opinion seems to have been that the defense was made up of scrap iron, old papers, big battleships, and high explosives. President William Lindsay Young of Park college gives an entirely different conception of the matter. He says:

"I believe in National Defense against racial antagonisms which weaken that social solidarity essential to a healthy nation."

I believe in National Defense against the persecution of minorities, because such persecution is detrimental to the preservation of our democratic heritage.

I believe in National Defense against State coercion of the individual's conscience, because such coercion destroys the character foundation of our nation.

I believe in National Defense against those who use patriotism as a cloak in order to reap profits from the present tragic world suffering.

I believe in National Defense against an economic system which lacks sufficient opportunity for the young, makes possible an army of millions of unemployed, and lacks adequate security for the old.

I believe in National Defense against political demagogues and all vested interests which tamper in any way with those rights of freedom of speech, press, and assembly as guaranteed by the Constitution, and the Bill of Rights.

I believe in National Defense against the futile faith that a strong army and navy is all that is needed to preserve and perpetuate that cherished freedom for which our forefathers so valiantly struggled.

Journalists Die Young

"The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly."

You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it somehow will get by.

Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps.

It shrinks down in a corner, and it never stirs or peeps.

That typographical error, too small for human eyes.

Till the ink is on paper, when it grows to mountain size.

The boss, he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair and groans.

The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and moans—

The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be.

But that typographical error is the only thing you see."

We Hit An Embarrassing Situation

THE FREE LANCE BY BOB WARTH

While meditating from time to time upon that Ultimate in Vir-tuosity that Pinnacle of Excellence, that Reincarnation of all that is Light, Just, and Good—the American Way of Life—we have more than once, to our horror and amazement of course, encountered some highly embarrassing situations for a people to be in who are so consistently, and periodically, beating the drums for democracy and freedom.

One of the more grossly incongruous items upon our mental agenda is the timeworn, but still vital, problem of the Negro and, for that matter, racial prejudice in general. As our readers are no doubt vaguely familiar with some such controversy, we should like, at this point, to serve notice that we do not propose to mince matters by dealing in the usual shifty generalizations which usually amounts to nothing more than a plaintive plea for more goodwill toward men and a hasty dismissal of the subject. Therefore we warn the racial bigot to read no further if he wishes to avoid literary emphysema for we definitely dislike any and all who maintain that one percent of the monkey is innate.

ly inferior to another merely because the pigment of his skin is a trifle darker or yellower as the case may be. In fact, we would much rather associate with a man like Richard Wright or Paul Robeson than nine-tenths of the student on this campus or, indeed nine-tenths of the faculty members.

Every nation, at all times and everywhere, has sought to glorify its own culture, character, and ideology at the expense of all other nations. This, unfortunately, is a necessary corollary to a feeling of national pride—how else may a nation build up its own ego than by using other peoples as a measuring rod? That is not to condemn wholesale all manifestations of patriotic pride which are many times justifiable, but such sentiments grade form the innocuous metaphysics of the DAR to absurd and dangerous racial doctrines and brutal persecutions of the sections of the "inferior" non-Aryan races to be found in Germany today.

We can readily see that the forces of organized ignorance have been actively at work in this country also, the primary difference being that the positive recognition from the government that it needs to be a thumping success. By "positive" we mean that there has been, so far as we know, no official acts—legislative, executive, or judicial—which might indicate that the government encourages or supports the inherent superiority of Americans as a "racial" group. However, as everyone knows, there have been numerous actions, such as, to name a few, the "grandfather clause" and poll taxes in the South which have effectively disenfranchised the Negro, the discriminatory exclusion of Orientals from the immigration laws, and various Supreme Court decisions which have upheld on technicalities the obvious unconstitutionality of federal, state, and local statutes.

These are the official ones only, as we have said. There remains a horde of unofficial dogmas, countenances, intangible prejudices, and open discriminations which run the gamut from an Alabama lynching mob to the hoary dictum that the President of the United States must be white, non-Schmitz, a Republican or Democrat and safely Protestant.

Exhibit Of Paintings, Prints Runs Gamut Of Techniques

By GAIL KIRN

Painting and printmaking run the gamut of techniques, as exhibited in the Student Show in the Music room of the Student Union building. These students under the teaching direction of Professor Edward Fisk, are quite evidently doing creative work and developing personal styles in many media.

There are 21 students from the classes of 1941-1942 represented, among them are several graduating seniors. These are Bea Moretti, Gail Kirn, Corinne Carhartt and Lavenia Warner.

Miss Moretti has developed a personal style of humorous charm in her painting; among her prints the wood block of "Jo" is boldly and freely executed. The block which is exhibited with the cut is especially interesting in its rich blacks and yellow browns. A new print technique, new at least to this part of the country and seen heretofore only in the work of Mr. Fisk himself, the stencil, is present in several of Miss Kirn's work. The oil-on-glass, which are also by Miss Kirn, are decorative illustrations of Baudelaire poems. The prints of Corinne Carhartt and Lavenia Warner exhibit still-life.

Exhibits Listed

Other students exhibiting are: Agnes Jennings with her amusing "New Version"—Memorial Hall being a stock subject for most student painters; Peggy Hartman showing a still life; Virginia Callos exhibiting a very sensitively painted interior, Charles Boggs painting methodically an almost abstract still life, "Circles and Squares"; Carl Ratliff, who shows an interest in realistic still life studies choosing odds and ends as his theme; June Wyatt painting a nice plea for the Red Cross knitting circles; Kate Woods showing another interior; and Kibler, with the only watercolor in the exhibit. Special note should be made of the five oils shown by Elsie Flishman, whose work shows seriousness and intentness of study. Miss Flishman handles her pigment in application exceedingly well for a student with only a year's experience in painting.

Graduate Entries

Also in the exhibit are works from the brushes, stylus, and crayon of graduates, among whom we may mention Jeanne Bowne's lithographs and oils, Susan Jackson's lithographs, and Christine Brown's prints which are well-remembered from past exhibits. We again have a chance to view Miss Brown's painting "Gardenia Seller".

Among the drawings, Clay Lancaster has his little "Kneifclaster", an interesting and imaginative documentation of Lexington. There is also Lancaster's delicate "Venus"

HUGH MOORHEAD

Engineers "Dunk" On Site Of Ye Olde Rocke Garden

By MILDRED MURRAY

The only remains of a once beautiful rock garden is about to come into its full glory. In a week or two while most students are buried in text books and term papers, the engineer's fish pond will look its best with the lilies blooming and the gold fish idly swimming about looking for a shady leaf to hide from the eyes of curious college students.

About ten years ago, the late Dr. Paul Anderson was still head of the Engineering college, the pool was the center of a very informal garden of rocks and wild flowers, according to Gordon Thurman, superintendent of the engineering shops.

The flowers were gathered from all sections of the country and were placed in the garden under the supervision of Dean Anderson, who liked "fixing up the campus for the students to enjoy." Many of the flowers were transplanted to the botanical gardens after Dean Anderson's death and only a rhododendron bush or two are left, according to Thurman.

The same gold fish have seen several college generations come and go, since they were placed in the pool in the early '30's when it was built, and have not been disturbed since. They are left in the pond all winter and are fed oatmeal, bread, and such bits by members of the engineering department.

Engineering students laughingly recall that they almost made a swimming pool out of their pond two years ago when they "dunked" into it a student who had antagonized the college. Besides that, however, little excitement has come the way of the pond, unless you could call providing a meeting place for scores of students excitement.

Ex-University Students Go From Books To Wings

Air Corps Sends News Of Trainees

Over the nation, former University students are getting their wings in the United States air corps. From Alabama, from Florida, and from Texas comes news of their progress.

Baseball Team Plays Host To "Spook" Team Tomorrow

By BOB ADAIR
Kernel Sports Editor

That spook team is on the way again. Tomorrow at 1 o'clock the Eastern State Teachers College Maroons will invade the Stoll field baseball diamond seeking vengeance for a narrow 3-2 defeat dished out by the Kentucky Wildcats at Richmond May 1.

Spook team? Yes, when the Maroons take the field some of the Wildcats fans who have never seen them in action will probably draw back in horror from shock or run to the armory for protection.

Why? Because when the Maroons rush onto the diamond they will, in all probability, give the appearance of a horde of demons or a band of men from Mars. This will be true if the Maroons follow the custom of past years.

GRUESOME GREEN

In past invasions of Stoll field, the Maroons have always spread a mixture of mud and a green salve on their cheek bones, close under the eyes. The green coloring makes the players look all the more gruesome and the mixture is applied in a slanting position, which may cause some of the fans to think the Japs have invaded Kentucky.

The purpose of this application of good faith and green stuff is to protect the players' eyes from the glare of the sun. Many teams and numerous individual big league stars of the past have used this method of lessening the possibility of losing a high fly ball in the sun.

The Eastern team is one of the few outfits which still employs this method of error insurance. Most players, especially outfielders, now wear sun glasses, but perhaps the Maroons are aware of the terror which their appearance throws into an enemy camp, and for that reason have clung to the old method, aware of the terror which their appearance throws into an enemy camp, and for that reason have clung to the old method.

The Teachers are also expected to enter tomorrow's battle with blood in their eyes because the Wildcats are the team they take most pleasure in beating and hate most to lose. Their loss to Coach Billy Black's Wildcats at Richmond came through Maroon errors and a perfectly executed squeeze play by the Cats.

Another tight game between the two teams is anticipated. The first game developed into a pitcher's duel between Marvin Akers and Gene Hall, the Cats collecting only four hits and the Maroons gathering only three.

TRIO OF THINLIES OFF TO SE MEET

Dunlap, Clement, Althaus Compete

Coach Joe Rupert and three of his Wildcat trackmen left Thursday morning for Birmingham, Alabama, where the trio will carry Kentucky's Blue and White colors into the Southeastern Track and Field meet. Rupert seemed confident that Carl Althaus, Bill Dunlap, and Coleman Clements, could hang up some points in the two-day meet, which will be held today and tomorrow. This trio has led the Wildcats through a fairly successful season and each of the conference barriers is a specialist in his events.

Althaus will perform in the field events and the hurdles and Clements will run in some of the distance events. Dunlap will probably enter the mile and two-mile runs since he is undefeated in both distances.

SAE'S AND AGR'S IN FINALS OF SOFTBALL LOOP

SAE Conquers ATO, AGRs Defeat KAs; Playoffs Are Wed.

SAE and Alpha Gamma Rho advanced to the finals of the fraternity intramural softball playoffs, Wednesday afternoon, by taking ATO and KA in two hard fought ball games. The independent league found the City boys sinking UK Band, and AXE dropping the New Englanders.

In a game packed with more thrills than a night on Bataan, SAE came from behind in the lucky seventh Wednesday to score eight runs, breaking up a good pitcher's duel between Bob Montgomery and Mondo Angelucci. The final count showed SAE on top, 9-5, after trailing by four runs going into the seventh.

Angelucci had everything under control until the big seventh, allowing only one unearned run, and three hits. Nevertheless, four successive walks, a single by Big Jim Purser, and Jerry Thornton's two run error in the seventh put SAE on top, 6-5, but they went ahead to lengthen their lead on Schlegel's four bagger, and Kohl's sacrifice. Ross finished the game for ATO.

ATO struck in the first inning to tie the score at 1-1, scored another in the third on Ross' single, Angelucci's walk, and Walsh's single, but not satisfied with this, Walsh connected with a long home run in the fifth to boost the lead to 3-1. Again in the sixth, the loser netted two more, and it looked as though they would win in a breeze. "The game's not over until the last man's out," yelled Pete Triplett, SAE first sacker, he meant what he said by the way they finished.

Although the encounter had all the thrills a sporting event could offer, the highlight of the game occurred in the first of the seventh when Billy "Cosey" Young stepped to the plate as a pinch hitter for SAE. Angelucci, in order to end the game quickly as possible, threw Young two strikes, and then tried the old "quick" pitch, attempting to catch the hitter off balance. Although the pitch was high, it worked to perfection, Young taking an off balance third strike swing.

Young Blows Up
Young, usually a tough pinch hitter, went wild after seeing what he had done, and then staged the feature attraction. He jumped high into the air, broke his bat against the ground, and took off for the bench like Superman. One of his brothers remarked that he might go root up a stump, but luckily there were none around. However, if anyone should get credit for winning the game, it could go to the man who tried. After Young's exhibition the pressure was taken off SAE, and they went ahead to net eight runs before the inning ended.

The winners gathered five hits off Angelucci, while ATO got seven off Montgomery. Both pitchers showed signs of wildness, but outside of that, a great game was turned in by both. Pete Triplett led SAE hitting with a double and single out of three trips followed by Schlegel with his circuit clout out of four tries. Purser's single in the seventh accounted for two runs. Jiggs Walsh and Hack Ross led the losers with two hits apiece. Besides his two hits, one of which was a long home run to deep center, Walsh played an excellent defensive game on the third sack.

AGR had little trouble in taking KA, 16-9, to enter the finals. Bill Renaker, Mitchell Yowell, and Lee paced the winners both offensively and defensively, and Long, Hill, and Daniel held up for the losers. AGR will play SAE for the fraternity championship, the winner of this contest will play the independent league winners for the university prize.

KERNEL SPORTS

The Sporting Way

BY BOB ADAIR

Every year at about this time the Kernel sports staff attempts to name an all-star intramural diamond ball team. . . The final play-offs are not yet completed this year and for this reason the judges had difficulty in making their selections. . . However a poll was conducted this week with Kernel writers and game officials as the judges. . . The team is not an official all-star aggregation, but it will serve to give credit to some of the outstanding players in the intramural leagues. . . Independent and Fraternity leagues are combined in the poll.

There was plenty of hot competition for the third base position, with Davis Vaughan of the Sigma Nu team and Jiggs Walsh of the ATO's being separated by only one point. . . Points were judged on the basis of the number of first and second team votes for each player. . . Three points was given for a nomination for the first team and two points was given for a second team nomination. . . Although Vaughan received one more vote for the first team than did Walsh, the latter received two second team votes while Vaughan got none. . . Therefore, on the point basis, Walsh was placed on the first team with seven points and Vaughan on the second team with six. . . Both players also received votes for the center field post.

CATS TURN ON FOR 18-7 WIN OVER SOLDIERS

Blast Ft. Darnall In 18 Hit Assault As Akers Notches

The Kentucky baseball team unleashed an 18-hit assault against the Fort Darnall General Hospital army team at Danville Wednesday afternoon to conquer the soldiers 18-7.

Although the Fort Darnall infield is ranked as one of the best among army teams, eight soldier errors accompanied the Wildcats' avalanche of hits. The Cats took the lead in the first inning on a walk to Coach Billy Black, a single by Bruce Boeheler, on which Black scored when the center fielder fumbled the ball, and a two-run homer by Milt Tocco.

Randall Hammer opened the three run second inning for Kentucky by blasting a home run and the Cats went on to score in all but one inning.
